What is honour related conflicts? And what does the concept “honour” entail? (II)

(Continuation of round 1A)

This round of paper presentations discuss different approaches to the concept of honour related conflicts. The three paper presentations will respectively discuss the particular and the general aspects of honour related conflicts. The presentations discuss whether honour related conflicts should be perceived as a kind of gender-based violence, as a cultural specific phenomenon or something in between. This round of presentations also introduces the subject of perceptions of masculinity and violence by discussing homophobic 'honour' abuse in England.

2B: Pia Aursand, Angela Voulgari, Inge Loua, Achille van Hees, Hayco Ismaël Beelen

Experiences from a practical level – research studies.

In this round of paper presentations practical experiences and research studies from Norway, Holland, United Kingdom and Denmark are introduced. Different experiences with mediation in cases concerning honour related conflicts are discussed and insights about the target group from a psychological perspective are presented.
